The Understatement Of Year Ivy

The Understatement of the Year is a male/male romance about hockey players Rikker and Graham. This story parallels the second story, following the same timeline but not connecting all too often. When Rikker and Graham were in middle school they were best friends.

The Understatement of the Year by Sarina Bowen

This story isn't all fluffy and fairytales. It's raw and shows the lonely side of accepting yourself. One guy is out and friendless, and the other is living an impossible lie. The understatement of the year is about finding happiness and forgetting about what others think. Of course, there is some hockey in there too ;-P.

'The Understatement of the Year' is the third book in Sarina Bowen's New Adult romance series, 'The Ivy Years'. 'The Ivy Years' has fast become one of my favourite romance series, ever. Sarina Bowen hasn't simply set her New Adult series inside an elite American college, she's using that microcosm setting to explore serious issues - sometimes ripped from the headlines.

I LOVED The Understatement of the Year - there was just the right amount of angst between Rikker and Graham, I only wish there was more of them together. As soon as I finished this, I went straight to Extra Credit, and to the novella about Rikker and Graham. I adore these 2 guys, and was so happy there was more to their story.
